To whom it may concern

If you are like me and enjoy collecting the data and trying to decipher a meaning from this, but struggle in making the text you have written comply with the University guidelines for style and formatting, then you will experience the frustration of trying to please your supervisors and yourself.

I came to that point with my PhD thesis and was glad to find Chris Mulherin at The Public Sentence. What a relief it was to say to Chris here is what I have written can you please tidy it up so that style complies with the University Guidelines and the tables and figures are properly formatted. Please also proof read it to put the commas etc. in the right places.

Chris immediately understood the problem and while the topic would have been quite foreign to him he plodded through it all and presented me with a beautiful document.

Chris was extremely responsive and met each time frame that was set. I have no hesitation in recommending Chris to others who find the detail of thesis presentation difficult.

If you wish to discuss this with me please make contact using the details above.

Yours faithfully

Graeme H. Wallace OAM, KCSJ, MHSc.
